Colleagues,

I'm thrilled to share that my article has just been published:

Kuznetsov, M. Y. (2025). Erving Goffman's enduring legacy in social interaction studies. ACC Journal, 2025(3), 91–105. <https://lnkd.in/dT86h4-W>
Full text (open access): <https://lnkd.in/dykW4C9R>

Brief synopsis:

This paper explores Erving Goffman's dramaturgical analysis and frame analysis, bridging micro-interactions with macro-structures through modern tricksterism and agency–structure tension. The article offers a fresh perspective by situating Goffman's microsociological frameworks within the classical Weber–Merton–Parsons structural-functionalist tradition — reconceptualizing social “transformations” as strategic modern tricksterism (a creative navigation and subtle subversion of institutional scripts). It also highlights Goffman's enduring relevance for understanding digital performances (e.g. on platforms like X), stigmatization in identity politics, frame manipulation in media/politics, and micro–macro linkages in our globalized, tech-driven world.

Heartfelt thanks to Ing. Dana Nejedlová, Ph.D. and Mgr. Anastasiia Mazurchenko, Ph.D., as well as the entire editorial board of ACC Journal (Technická univerzita v Liberci, Czech Republic) — your thoughtful feedback, support, and high standards made this work significantly stronger and more rigorous!
